President Rhoades Tells Why the Savings Banks Acted.

Only a Precautionary Measure to Stop the Heavy Drain.

The Condition of These Institutions Sate Beyond Question.

The Why Brooklyn, Jersey City and Williamsburg have no cause for alarm over the action taken yeaterday by the savings bank in the services banks of New York Brooklyn, Jersey City and Williamsburg have no cause for alarm over the action taken yeaterday by the savings bank in the services banks of New York Brooklyn, Jersey City and Williamsburg have no cause for alarm over the action taken yeaterday by the savings bank in the services banks of New York Brooklyn, Jersey City and Williamsburg have no cause for alarm over the action taken yeaterday by the savings bank in the services of the Savings Bank.

whole story be told.

"The Executive Committee representing the savings banks, after consulting with sach other, decided that the time had arrived when they needed the advice and co-operation of the officers of other savings banks in this city and Brooklyn, and a number of those were invited to meet with the Committee.

"The banks represented at this meeting have on deposits ever $100,000,000, and an actual surplus over all liabilities of $100,000. Among them were those which constitute the largest in deposits of surplus revenue and inherent strength of surplus revenue and inherent strength was found that while no panic on the direction, there was nevertheless a steady withdrawal of moneys, which it was found that while no panic on the direction, there was nevertheless a steady withdrawal of moneys, which withdrawal of moneys, which withdrawal of moneys, which steed, and making it evident that sales of securities must soon follow."

"These securities must soon follow."

"These securities consist of loans upon real estate, United States Government bonds, State bonds and bonds of cities, towns, counties and villages in this State. All of these securities are recognized as most secure and safe in their character of any class of investment securities, but it must be borne in mind that so far as Rate and municipal securities are concerned the only purchasers in the market during a period of depression, except at a serious decline in price, and this condition of affairs applies with almost equal force to the selling of Government bonds, affecting price, and this condition of affairs applies with almost equal force to the selling of Government bonds, affecting price, and this condition of affairs applies with almost equal force to the selling of Government bonds, affecting price, and this condition of affairs applies with almost equal force to the selling of Government bonds, affecting price, and the price and the price, and this condition of affairs applies with almost equal force to the selling of Government bonds,

On the contrary, it ought to make them more confident, and it should certainly result contrary, it ought to make them more confident, and it should certainly result in checking the unnecessary drain on the resources of the banks by making it more difficult for the people to withdraw their funds."

How many of the savings banks would decide to require their depositors to give notice Mr. Ledwith could not say. He stated very positively, however, that none of the banks would take any action in the matter till next week.

There was a long line of depositors in front of the paying teller's desk at the Emigrant Savings Bank this morning withdrawing their money. A few were making deposits.

"This is only the usual sight," said Mr. Ledwith, "and, in fact, the number is smaller than it has been in some days. We are paying them to-day just as usual, and every depositor who comes here can get all his money if he wants it.

"We shall continue to do this until."

than 73,000 depositors the number you goe here is insignificant."

At the East River Savings Institution, 3 Chambers street, there were very few depositors drawing money—not more than the usual number, it was said. President Slocum told an "Evening World" reporter that he had been out of town and had not heard of the meeting of the Presidents, excepting what he had seen in the newspapers.

"The action taken, I must confess, is a surprise to me, for I do not see that it is necessary. It certainly is not in the case of this bank.

Both men were locked up in the Tremont station, Lynch on the charge of being a suspicious person and carrying a revolver without a permit, and Mullady as a suspicious person and for assaulting an officer.
The circumstances indicate that the men had no good intention in mind, and the police are making an investigation.
The men were identified later by Central Office men as well-known crooks, whose pictures are in the Rogues' Gallery.
Mullady was identified as Ned Farrell, a safe blower, whose picture is 820 in the gallery. He has served a number of terms in State prison for various crimes.

The wild dogs have become merous this Summer that they are said to be a source of great danger to hundreds of people who linger in the park until late at night. When occasionally the appearance of a mad dog in the park is announced in the newspapers, people don't realize that there are scores of other dogs which might be bitten and run mad, too, at almost any time. For the most part the dogs keep in the north end of the park, seldom going below Seventy-seventh street. The refusal of Chinese Inspector Scharf to disclose the names of the Custom-House officials whom he accused of

has been his stereotyped reply to the importunities of the reporters for the names of the officers guilty of fraud. A possible reason for keeping his own counsel in that particular regard was developed by Chief Agent Montgomery Col. Scharf's superior, in an unguarded noment this morning. Mr. Montgomery overheard Col. Scharf eay to an "Evening World" reporter that Collector Hendricks and his subordinates were careless about strictly enforcing the Chinese Exclusion act, because they expected to get out at any moment.

"Don't say that," thundered Mr.

Montgomery, and his bushy white hair seemed to stand straight up, while his eyes flashed with anger.
"Those men," he added in a

"Those men," he added in a loud voice, "may be discharged at any moment. It is not at all impossible.

"Last week the entire Custom-House force at Portland, Oregon, was discharged, and the officers were indicted. Many of the conditions that existed there and caused such a summary proceeding, exist here to-day.

"I am one of those men who will prosecute the law to the bitter end, and I don't propose to be lax in my duties here in this matter."

Col. Scharf looked at his superior with amazement. His appearance was that of a man who had labored to a certain end, guarding his ultimate object with zealous care, only to have it exposed at the very moment when he most desired to keep it secret.

He refused to speak of the possibility of indictments or whether he had in mind such a purpose when he began his investigation.

He realized that he had been indiscreet, and felt as angry with himself as he had been with Col. Scharf has stated that he had evidence of fraud and collusion on the part of Custom-House officials. Mr. Montgomery evidently believes that the charges can be proven, and it is reasonable to suppose, in view of the statements made this morning, that an effort will be made to indict some of the officials under suspicion.

July 8 a young fellow handed a letter to Hennessy, which read as follows:

"Friend Billy: Please send me the cash for inclosed check. I want to use the money at once. I am going to Casey's wake and will see you Monday. The check was drawn on the National Broadway Bank for $35, payable to T. F. Duncan, and purported to be signed by John Von Glahn. It was indorsed Thomas F. Duncan.

Mr. Hennessy had no hesitation in giving the messenger the money, as he knew Duncan was Calef Inspector Casey, of the Excise Department, and he also knew that Excise Inspector Casey, of the Fifth Ward, had died the day before. Another thing which Hennessy believed was that the check was drawn by excount." and when Hennessy mand is quiries Mr. Von Glahn and Mr. Duncan declared their names had been forged.

From the description given by the salcon-keeper the detectives arrested young Weitz a couple of days ago, and he said he got the check from a strange man, to whom he said he gave the money. Yesterday he identified Hephy, but
